For the last week of the 2014 series, August 23-29, two artists will be resident in the Casemates, in the military compound.

Mariah Sockabasin is an emerging fashion designer, artist, entrepreneur, as well as a young mother. She can be found gathering inspiration for her art in the woods as well as on the catwalk. She will be returning for the second time this summer to share her work and creativity at the Garrison District. Drop by to say hello to this fashionista on fire.

Donna Mulholland is an emerging, artist, creativity coach, and yoga teacher whose mantra is: "Do what you love!" Working in watercolour and acrylic, her approach to art is an intuitive and expressive one, embracing the thrill of putting paint to paper and listening to her heart to express joy and gratitude for life in vibrant colour. Consistent with the word "community" in this year's theme, Donna would like to explore collaborative painting processes engaging people who walk by in the creation of art.

The casemate will be open from Monday to Saturday, 10am-5pm, and Sunday from 12-5pm.
