Captain Fantastic

Matt Ross

120 mins

USA

2015

English

Cast: Viggo Mortensen, George MacKay, Steve Zahn, Kathryn Hahn, Frank Langella

The sophomore film from actor-director Matt Ross (best known for his roles on TV's Big Love and Silicon Valley), Captain Fantastic offers a delightfully offbeat and heartwarming tale about love, duty, and family.

Ben (Viggo Mortensen, A Dangerous Method, Eastern Promises) and his wife are non-conformists who have chosen to raise their six kids deep in the forests of the Pacific Northwest, where they have been taught to live off the land, trained to have the endurance of professional athletes, and instilled with advanced knowledge of philosophy, literature, and geopolitics (they consider soda “poison water” and celebrate “Noam Chomsky Day” in place of Christmas). When tragedy strikes and the delicate ecosystem of their counterculture paradise is thrown into disarray, Ben and his clan are forced to take a trip across the country in their camper van affectionately named “Steve.” Both heartbreak and hilarity ensue as the kids face some of their first social interactions with the wider world — and discover hot dogs. As his children see more of the world — and as his rebellious eldest son (George MacKay, Pride, Sunshine on Leith) becomes determined to march to the beat of his own drum — Ben begins to question whether shutting them off from it is the right decision.

Best known for his heavy-duty dramatic roles, Mortensen reveals a wonderful gift for comedy as the back-to-nature patriarch Ben, and his interactions with the young actors playing his children yields some truly laugh-out-loud moments (particularly when he doles out hunting knives to the older kids as presents, and bestows a copy of The Joy of Sex upon his six-year-old son). Boasting a stellar supporting cast that includes veterans Steve Zahn, Kathryn Hahn, and the great Frank Langella, Captain Fantastic is an irresistible comedy-drama that asks what it is that truly makes a family.

25. Theatre UNB presents Venus in Fur by David Ives Nov 30 - Dec 3

One of the hottest plays of the last five years, in all senses of the word, is coming soon to Theatre UNB. David Ives' dark comedy Venus in Fur, a play the New York Times described as a "delicious" and "suspense-packed study of the erotics of power," took the theatre world by storm upon its premiere in 2010 and was the most produced play in North America in 2013-14, with dozens of productions at major theatres across the United States and Canada.

Ives' play is set in a theatre where playwright-director Thomas Novachek is holding auditions for the lead female role in his new play, an adaptation of the 1870 erotic novel Venus in Furs by Leopold von Sacher-Masoch (from whose name the term "masochism" was derived). Just as he is lamenting the inadequacy of every actress he has auditioned, in walks Vanda Jordan. What ensues is by turns hilarious, strange, and darkly compelling, as Vanda, at first seemingly hopelessly unsuitable for the part, gradually reveals an amazing affinity for the play's material. Thomas and Vanda take on the roles of Sacher-Masoch's protagonists and delve further and further into Venus in Furs' dark world, to the point where fantasy and reality become blurred, engaging in a highly charged power play driven by desire and dominance. Along the way, roles become reversed, surprises abound, and the latest twist is never the last.

Directed by Kyra Lake and starring Hilary Ready and Djordje Lepir, Venus in Fur will be performed at 7:30pm nightly, Wednesday November 30 through Saturday December 3 at Memorial Hall on the UNB campus. Tickets are $14 regular, $10 senior/underwaged, and $8 for students, and will be available at the door. For more information email lfalken@unb.ca or phone 506 447-3078. Back to top.

2. Call for Submissions: The Lost Stories Project 2017

The Lost Stories Project collects little-known stories about the Canadian past, transforms them into works of public art on appropriate sites, and documents the process through a series of short films available in English, French, and other appropriate languages. Based at Concordia University and led by Concordia historian Ronald Rudin, in collaboration with professors from other universities and artists working in various media, the project has received support from the Canadian government's Canada 150 Fund to develop four new episodes for 2017.

Each of these episodes is built around a story chosen from those submitted by the public. In each case, a story will be paired with an artist who will have the task of interpreting it to create a permanent public artwork to be located on a site related to that story. The artist's creative process will figure prominently in the documentary films that we will be producing. We are interested in allowing viewers to see the wide array of choices that an artist has to make, along the way showing both those choices that were incorporated into the artwork as well as those that were rejected. Interested artists should be comfortable in speaking on camera about their work. To get a better idea of the artist's on-camera role, see the pilot episode for the series, Thomas Widd's Lost Story, at the project website.

The four stories selected to mark the 150th anniversary of Canada deal with various topics from the past and are from all parts of the country. Further details about these stories are also available at the project website. However, this particular call is aimed at artists interested in creating artwork that tells the story described below.

The Lepers of Sheldrake Island, New Brunswick: Leprosy was a public health challenge along sections of the eastern coast of New Brunswick. Mostly afflicting Acadians, the problem was so severe that in 1844 the New Brunswick government sent thirty lepers to Sheldrake Island, at the mouth of the Miramichi River. The lepers endured difficult conditions. Some escaped, and outrage over their situation resulted in their relocation in 1849 to a new facility, closer to their families. Artwork will be constructed on a site, on the grounds of St. Peter's and St. Paul's Church, the white church building in the photo, that overlooks the island.

The successful candidate will need to complete their artwork so that it can be installed during the summer of 2017, on a date still to be established, most likely in July or August. A significant public event will be staged to mark the installation of the artwork.

The deadline for submissions is November 25, 2016.

We invite artists who have some connection with this story to submit a dossier, no later than 25 November. Since the creative process will take place on camera, we are not asking for detailed proposals of possible artwork. However, we are interested in reviewing artist's CVs, and receiving links to works that we can view on-line. Moreover, it would be helpful to have a sense of the type of artwork that is central to your practice, together with any pertinent experience that would indicate your comfort in discussing your practice on camera.

Dossiers will be evaluated by the team directing the Lost Stories Project, which includes individuals with a wide array of experience in presenting stories about the past in public space. Short lists will be created in late November, with interviews (most likely by Skype) to follow. Final decisions will be made by mid-December. The successful candidate will receive $2,000 as exhibition rights and a $10,000 budget for supplies and materials. If travel is required to the site for installation of the artwork, a small travel budget is available.

Your submission should contain:

- Cover letter outlining your ties to this specific story or to one of the communities touched by this story. In addition, indicate your reasons for wanting to take part in the making of a marker for this story and your experience related to speaking about your practice
- Your CV
- Examples of previous works. Please send links to your website or other online site (such as Dropbox or Google Drive) to view examples of your previous work

For further information, or to submit your dossier, contact: historylost@concordia.ca, using the subject line: Lost Stories Artwork.
